

ACTIVITY TIME!

Now is the perfect time to start flexing your creativity muscles—by using the anything-can-be-anything idea. Table 3 names four common household objects. Below each object, write down seven things that these objects might be in pretend play with your child. The only rule is that none of the seven things can relate to the original object. (For instance, you can't write down "canteen" under the object "water bottle" or "cooking utensil" under the object "frying pan.")
